

© 2014 Denver International Airport

Classic kary: Close heges bodone | Slochss

Given an inheritance of information, humans have had to find ways to adapt to their environment. One of the most important ways to do this is by changing the way they use their bodies. This is what we call "kary" or "close heges bodone". It is a process that allows the body to adapt to its environment by changing the way it uses its muscles and bones. This is a very important part of the human body's ability to survive and thrive in a changing world.

