

Adults train operating in non-traffic situations (e.g., in the airport) before they are allowed to fly in traffic, and they are supervised by experienced instructors. The same principle applies to the training of pilots.