

SHADOW SONDIC

Tall eld larks are unlikely to be the first to be affected by climate change, but the ground on which they roost, and on which they build their nests, may become more and more difficult to find as the ground dries up.